Frequently Asked Questions

1. How can I find error rates?

Following specialized travel blogs and websites can help you discover error fares as soon as they appear. There are also online services that notify you of these fees.

2. How does VPN help you find cheaper flights?

Airlines tend to offer different prices depending on the country from which you are accessing the website. A VPN allows you to change your virtual location, allowing you to access these lower prices.

3. What is hidden city ticketing?

It is a practice in which you book a flight with a stopover at the desired location and disembark at that stopover, instead of the final destination. However, there are risks associated with this practice and it is important to be aware of this before opting for it.

4. Why is it important to compare prices across multiple sites?

Each booking site may have different offers and varying prices for the same flight. Comparing prices across multiple sites ensures you're getting the best deal possible.

5. How do price alerts work?

Price alerts notify you when the price of a specific flight drops. You can set price alerts on various flight booking sites and you will be notified via email or via the app when the price drops.

6. When is the best time to book flights?

For domestic trips, the ideal is to book 3 to 4 months in advance. For international travel, the ideal is 5 to 6 months in advance.

7. How can I benefit from loyalty programs?

Loyalty programs allow you to accumulate points or miles each time you fly with a specific airline. These points can be redeemed for free flights, upgrades and other benefits.

8. What are flash sales and offers?

Flash sales and offers are short-term promotions where airlines offer flights at significantly reduced prices. These deals can last for just a few hours or a few days, so it's important to act fast when you see one.

With these tips, we hope your next trip will be even more affordable. Remember: the key to finding cheap flights is flexibility and research. Have a nice trip!
